Profile

Randi McCray is a dynamic highly skilled facilitator with ten years experience leading group conversations, training, and workshops with diverse groups.

Randi's experience includes; leading two (2) diversity and inclusion initiatives at Yale University, facilitating the racial equity initiative for a school readiness council, and facilitating dialogue on topics of race, power, privilege and social change.

Randi's facilitation style is supportive, engaging, and warm. Her presence has led to the requests from diverse groups who want to be inclusive and community centered in their agendas. Randi feels that her role as facilitator is to guide dialogue that allows for all voices to be present in the conversation. It is on this premise she believes that true community and inclusive agendas can lead to sustainable change.

Lastly, Randi is a doctoral student whose research focuses on the influence of cultural intelligence in cross-cultural groups working towards social change. She expects to defend her dissertation in the Fall of 2018.
